Addagrip's Addapave surface, used on Kilburn High Road, is a resin-based surface imprinted using a pattern tool to give the appearance of paving.

ADDAPAVE ALLOWS COUNCIL TO RE-SURFACE WITH LITTLE DISRUPTION

Addagrip's Addapave surface has just been used by London Borough of Brent to replace the footpaths that front the private retail forecourts on Kilburn High Road.

As many of the footpaths had underground cellars, construction depth was restricted, which meant to refurbish the site with traditional paving slabs would have been problematic, expensive and disruptive.

Addapave was the perfect solution as it gives the appearance of paving yet the polymer modified resin-based surface can be cold applied quickly and easily on existing surfaces including asphalt, concrete or timber. The council's Narinder Dhanjal comments, "The whole process involved very little disruption and was extremely cost effective. The resin was simply laid and imprinted using a special pattern tool and could then be walked on within a couple of hours."

900 square metres of Addapave was used for the project, laid by Addagrip's BBA approved contractor Deco-Rez Ltd (for John Crowley maintenance.) The slab pattern and colour was matched to the existing slabs to co-ordinate with the rest of the landscaping.

An added benefit of the Addapave system is that there are no trip hazards unlike traditional slabs which can cost council's thousands of pounds in personal injury claims every year.

Impressed with the results, London Borough of Brent has subsequently used Addapave to surface High Road, Wembley.
